Examiner Feedback

The exams this year were in general very good. There were no fails from those students who attempted the exam. One student managed to achieve a mark of 85%, which has not occurred in recent offerings of this course. This student showed clear, thoughtful and insightful responses across each of their four answers. It is impossible to achieve top marks without such consistency, but also shows that consistency and application pay off. Of the students who did not do so well there was one key issue was overly short responses: that is, responses that were brief and lacking in thought or application. It was also the case, at times, that responses were unclear/illegible. In this exam there was a large number of students 65% or higher this shows that a good proportion of the students had achieved more than a basic understanding of the core material for this course. That was pleasing.
